CURRENT TOPICS.

IT WILL BE REMEMBERED that some time ago a well-informed correspondent warned the profession through our columns that articles of clerkship are not assignable, and that the Master of the Rolls intended to act upon this view. The following notice has now been issued by direction of the Master of the Rolls:—"For the future it is requested that no assignment of articles be made, but that further articles be entered into reciting that the original contract has been put an end to by mutual consent (or by the death of the master, or as the case may be). No objection will be made to taking assignments for registration; at all events, till after the long vacation; but the profession are requested to conform to the new practice as quickly as possible."

THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT has issued an Imperial decree as to the mode in which it proposes to treat neutrals and enemies during the present war. This decree, judging from the abstract published in last Monday's Times, seems to be framed on enlightened and liberal principles. Turkish subjects dwelling in Russia are allowed to continue their avocations under the protection of the law. Turkish ships have a certain time allowed for freely leaving Russian ports. The subjects of neutral States engaged in commerce are promised the utmost protection consistent with the necessities of war, which necessities, however, as the Times rules we noticed last week show, may very seriously interfere with the trading of neutrals, and even with the safety of their vessels. The decree recapitulates the different provisions of the Declaration of Paris as to privateering, as to blockades being effective, as to a neutral flag protecting enemies' goods except contraband, and as to neutral cargoes being safe even under an enemy's flag. It also recognizes the St. Petersburg Declaration of 1868, against the use of explosive projectiles of a less weight than 400 grammes, and extends the stipulations of the Geneva Convention to any badge which the Turks may adopt in the place of the Red Cross. Turkey, we may remark, as well as Russia, was a party to the Declarations of Paris and St. Petersburg, and is therefore bound by them, but Turkey was not a party to the Geneva Convention, though she has expressed herself willing to adopt its provisions provided she may substitute another badge for the Christian cross. The decree goes on to promise that the commerce of neutrals on the Danube is to remain as free as possible, and that the military authorities will protect the works and personnel of the commission which, under the Treaty of Paris, is authorized to keep the mouths of the Danube navigable. This is a matter of great practical importance to Austria and Germany, and no doubt those Powers will use their influence to secure that full effect is given to these parts of the decree. The last, and, to an international lawyer, the most interesting part of the decree is the declaration that the resolutions of the Brussels Conference of 1874 are to be observed. This Conference, as some of our readers may remember, was convened at the instance of the Russian Government to consider the rules of military warfare, and was attended by representatives of all the independent European States, but it did not result in any convention or declaration binding upon the different Governments, but only in a series of resolutions, representing upon each point the views entertained by the majority of the delegates of the different Governments; and these resolutions, together with the comments upon them, the reservations, and the separate opinions which the different delegates inserted in the protocols of the proceedings, were together submitted to the different Governments as a basis for an ulterior exchange of ideas. Nothing further was done, and now the Russian Government adopts these resolutions as the rules it proposes to follow during the present war. There seems to be little, if any, reason to regret this, as the resolutions are, no doubt, drawn up with more consideration for the inhabitants of an invaded country, and with a greater regard for the principles of humanity, than any rules which the commander of a Russian, or, indeed, of any continental, invading army would have been likely to draw up by himself, as may be seen by comparing the original Russian proposals at the Conference with the modified resolutions ultimately adopted. But it seems desirable to call attention to the fact that the resolutions have no binding international character; and that, even as expressing the opinions of the Conference, they must be read subject to the reservations and separate opinions contained in the protocols—reservations and opinions which, for the most part, are more favourable to the invaded population and less favourable to the invading army than the resolutions.

MANY AND VARIOUS are the difficulties which have arisen from the co-existence of the procedure before the Judicature Acts with the procedure established by those Acts, but the monstrous absurdity of this co-existence was never better exemplified than by the case of Christ's College, Brecknock, v. Martin, in which the Court of Appeal decided on Tuesday last that the time for moving to set aside an award in a voluntary reference depends upon the Acts 9 Will. 3, c. 15, and 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 6, and not upon the rules of court by which the present sittings are regulated. The Act 9 Will. 3, c. 15, provides that "any arbitration procured by corruption . . . shall . . . be set aside by any court of law or equity so as complaint of such corruption be made in the court where the rule is made for submission before the last day of the next term after such arbitration made or published to the parties." At the time this Act was passed, both Easter and Trinity Terms depended on the movable feasts of Easter and Trinity; but by 11 Geo. 4, c. 70, s. 6, fixed periods were prescribed for all terms alike; and it was enacted that Hilary Term should begin on the 11th and end on the 31st of January; that Easter Term should begin on the 15th of April and end on the 8th of May; that Trinity Term should begin on the 22nd of May and end on the 12th of June, and that Michaelmas Term should begin on the 2nd and end on the 25th of November. Then came the Judicature Act, 1873, which, by section 26, abolished terms "so far as relates to the administration of justice," but expressly provided that "in all other cases in which, under the law now existing, the terms into which the legal year is divided are used as a measure for determining the time at or within which any act is required to be done, the same may continue to be referred to for the same or the like purpose, unless and until provision is otherwise made by any lawful authority." It is well known that by the rules of court (ord. 61) the new "sittings" by no means correspond with the old "terms"; in fact, we have a return to the pre-Georgian state of things, for the Easter and Trinity "Sittings" depend upon "movable feasts." The confusion which results from the dual periods may be imagined, and careful mathematical calculations must be made in order not to be "out of time" in each particular case. The hardship is still greater in the case of an application to set aside a compulsory reference, for, by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 9, all such applications "shall and may be made within the first seven days of the term next following the publication of the award to the parties, whether made in vacation or in term"; and in such a case it is said to be possible that a particular incidence of movable feasts may have the effect of abolishing the seven days altogether. We are glad to observe that the Lord Chief Justice spoke of the desirability of a new "rule of court" to put these matters straight. But the question arises whether a mere rule of court can effect the change, or whether the "lawful authority" which the framers of the 26th section of the Act of 1873 had in their minds' eye was not an Act of Parliament. The question must depend, not on the Act of 1873, but on the 17th section of the Act of 1875, which superseded it. This section allows rules to be made for regulating sittings, pleadings, practice, and procedure, and matters relating to practice and procedure. On the whole we incline to the opinion that the regulation of time for setting aside an award in a compulsory reference under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, is within the powers of this section, but that an award in a voluntary reference under the statute of William III. is not. However this may be, we hope that the "lawful authority," wherever it may be found, will be prompt to redress the grievance to which we have adverted. The mere knowledge of the trap (and the frequency with which practitioners have fallen into it promises that it will soon become pretty well known) is not enough.

A REPORT recently printed on the subject of the receipts and expenditure of the Chancery Division shows the magnitude of the funds of suitors with which this division of the High Court has to deal. During the year ending the 31st of August, 1876, the amount of cash received was £12,670,390, and the amount paid out was £12,341,129. The balance remaining at the end of the year consisted of £4,920,151 in cash, and £64,485,595 nominal value of securities. The number of accounts in the Paymaster's books was 33,467 (this is not the number of causes and matters in the Chancery Division as erroneously stated in the daily press; the causes and matters in the Chancery Division should number something above 100,000). The general observations of the Comptroller and Auditor-General form the most interesting portion of this report. Numerous mistakes have arisen through the ignorance of the Audit Department, an ignorance pardonable enough considering that the work of understanding chancery orders is absolutely new to them. We also see sundry variations between the views of the Audit Department and the Treasury on certain subjects. For instance, on the subject of the delay in carrying out orders to be acted upon by the Chancery Paymaster, the Audit Department wishes it to be the duty of the Paymaster to act upon an order whether it is brought before his notice or not, while the Treasury consider that he is only responsible for executing orders when formally brought to his notice, and that this is the proper position he should hold on the subject. Apart from the utter impossibility of the Paymaster's making all the payments directed by an order without the intervention of a solicitor, it must be remembered that the division of a fund is preceded in ninety-nine cases out of 100 by a taxation and payment of costs. A fruitful source of mistakes made by the Chancery Paymaster consists in the fact that two or three orders may be in force at one time dealing with different parts of the same fund, or dealing in a different manner with a fund. So long as the second order is not brought to his notice he will act upon the first, so that he is liable to fall into the error of investing under the first order money which by the second is directed to be paid out. The Paymaster's rule is that "a second order supersedes a first so far as it is not worked out"; but unless the second is carried into his office to be acted on it is not part of his duty to take cognizance of it. A great burden would be imposed on the Paymaster if he were required to read every order relating to funds in court, and to compare one with the other so as to be able to note any variation in dealing with funds. It would take the time of three or four clerks to make an index of every such order, together with a tabular syllabus of its provisions. Mistakes of the description pointed out do not occur very frequently, but when they do occur they give rise to much lengthy correspondence between the Paymaster and the Audit Office.

A defect in the present system which the Auditor thinks he has discovered is, that "stop orders have been issued and the funds in court have nevertheless been dealt with under previous directions, owing, apparently, to the failure of solicitors to bring such stop orders under the notice of the Paymaster." We cannot coincide with the Auditor in his sympathy with those who, having the opportunity, do not take the proper steps to make their charges available. On the subject of delay in bringing in stop orders, a letter from the Lord Chancellor's secretary is quoted in which he says that, "if serious difficulties arise from the omission of agents to bring in stop orders, it might be considered whether rules should not be framed by which the performance of this duty might be enforced upon them, and they might be visited with the responsibility for its omission."

On another point we may be sure suitors will not agree with the Auditor. The latter considers that when money which is directed to be invested is, by mistake, placed on deposit, the interest on the deposit-money is "not properly chargeable to the public." To ordinary mortals it seems that the money is lent to "the public," whether invested in consols or placed on deposit, and that "the public," which derives the benefit, should pay the interest.

Upon the whole of these observations of the Auditor-General we would say that the amount of red tape always complained of by solicitors as being appurtenant to the Accountant-General's office has been increased nearly tenfold by the system of audit which is applied to the Paymaster-General.

AMONG THE AMENDMENTS, chiefly verbal, made in the Bankruptcy Bill on the third reading in the House of Lords, was one of considerable importance relating to the proceeds of sale of goods taken in execution and sold, substituted for clause 101. It is now provided that—

"When the goods of any trader have been taken in execution in respect of a judgment and sold, the officer of the court from which the process issued shall, if he have no notice of a bankruptcy petition having been presented against or by, or of a deed of arrangement having been filed by, such trader, pay the balance of the proceeds of sale (after deducting expenses) into the same court; but if he have notice of such petition or deed, he shall hold the said balance upon trust to pay the same to the trustee or receiver or other person entitled thereto under the petition or deed. If no such petition or deed be filed by or against the trader within six weeks after the sale under such execution, the execution creditor shall (subject and without prejudice to any other provisions of this Act) be entitled to such balance, but otherwise the same shall be divisible among the creditors of the trader."

Surely a month would be long enough to tie up the money?

The motions before Mr. Justice Fry occupied his lordship one hour and a-half on Tuesday.

THE COMPLETION OF THE JUDICATURE REFORMS.

It was probably wise to confine the operation of the Judicature Act of 1873 to the initiation of the fusion of law and equity, and the re-modelling of civil pleading; it was certainly safer to do so, for with the equity bar in arms about the results of fusion, and the common law bar alarmed about trial by jury, it would have been rash to provoke a judicial insurrection by measures tending to economy of judicial power. Yet it could hardly have escaped the attention of the framers of the Act that an improved procedure would necessarily result in a largely increased amount of business, and that the existing arrangements for the trial of causes would be inadequate to meet the pressure thus occasioned. Before the Judicature Acts came into operation the Lord Chancellor avowed his opinion that the system which prevailed in the common law courts of having more judges than one to sit as judges of first instance could not continue; and the legislation of last session relating to hearings before a single judge was the commencement of reforms in the direction of economizing judicial strength. No one who considers the list of actions for trial in Middlesex can doubt that much more remains to be done in this direction, and attention has been called to the subject by the appearance of a pamphlet by Mr. Day, Q.C., containing a scheme for remedying the present waste of judicial power in the Common Law Divisions.

Broadly stated, Mr. Day's proposal is a return to the judicial arrangements which existed before the Court of King's Bench had usurped a general jurisdiction over all actions between subject and subject. He proposes that the Queen's Bench Division should retain all jurisdiction which it now exercises in proceedings other than ordinary civil actions; he would also transfer to it all the peculiar jurisdictions of the Common Pleas and Exchequer Divisions; also the Crown Cases Reserved, and appeals from inferior courts; but he would withdraw from it all original jurisdiction in ordinary cases between subject and subject. He suggests that the Division should consist of the Chief Justice and three justices, probably the three senior justices of the common law divisions of the High Court. These four judges would sit in London throughout the legal year. Their staff would consist of the Queen's Coroner, the Master of the Crown Office, the Queen's Remembrancer, one master, and an associate. One judge might sit alone for trials by jury, and for motions and also in chambers; but the court for disposing of all other business would be constituted of three judges. Power should be given to the court to direct the trial at any place before a circuit judge of any indictment or information which may be more conveniently so tried.

We think some such concentration of the peculiar jurisdictions would be a valuable reform, but we see no reason why the anomaly of a Queen's Bench Division should be kept alive for that purpose; why not abolish all the divisions; assign all the business referred to above to a divisional court of the High Court, and let the Chief Justice of England and three justices, chosen, say, for a year, constitute this court? We greatly doubt, however, whether this court would do for Crown Cases Reserved. Would the decision of the Franconia case by four judges have given satisfaction?

The next step in Mr. Day's proposal is the abolition of the Common Pleas and Exchequer Divisions of the High Court. He proposes that six judges should be assigned for the hearing of ordinary civil suits between subjects, and the nature of his scheme cannot be described better than by saying that if it were adopted there would be six common law Vice-Chancellors. The plaintiff in any ordinary common law action would assign it to one of these judges, and the judge to whom the action was assigned would have the control of it in all its stages, in chambers as well as in court; would determine all issues of law by himself, and would either try the issues of fact by himself, or by a jury in Middlesex or London; or, if more convenient, would send the issues of fact to be tried in the country. Each of these judges would sit all the legal year in London, and would have a staff composed of three masters, who would act as registrar, associate, taxing master, and chief clerk. The judge to whom a cause is attached would have the power of granting a new trial on the ground of a verdict being against evidence, and on the ground of misdirection by a circuit judge; and there would be an appeal from his decision on this and other matters to the Court of Appeal.

We fail to see the advantage of allowing the plaintiff to assign a case to a particular judge. The result would be to crowd the list of a popular judge, and so necessitate frequent transfers; and there are other results well known to practitioners in the Chancery Division. We see, however, considerable advantage in assigning cases to a particular judge if this can be done without the knowledge or intervention of the parties—e.g., by ballot. There would probably be much saving of time in the hearing of chamber applications if this were done.

Mr. Day's next proposal is, we think, wholly impracticable. He would have six judges (probably the junior justices) set apart exclusively for circuit business, both civil and criminal. They would try prisoners at the present assize towns, but would sit for the trial of civil actions only at certain great centres, and, having no original jurisdiction in civil business, would try on the civil side only issues sent to them for trial, transmitting the findings to the judge who directed the issues. They would have the same officers as are now attached to judges on circuit. Mr. Day meets an objection which may be raised to this part of his proposal by pointing out that, although the absence of these six judges from London would doubtless be much more lengthened than at present, yet by changing circuits every six months the circuit judge's duties would be varied and relieved. The circuit judge would, moreover, always have the prospect of succeeding to the position of a town judge.

As regards the country suitor this would simply be to reintroduce the old system with its main evils redoubled. What we have been aiming at has been to enable the suitor to have fact and law determined together; whereas under this arrangement the country suitor would have, as of old, the facts tried in the country and then have his case hung up to have the law decided in town. But, independently of this, what would be the effect of the arrangement on the judges? The circuit judge would be a superior kind of under-sheriff, and one obvious effect would be to render the leaders of the bar less inclined to accept the post of a puisne judge in the High Court. The prospect of five or six, or more, years of life in judges' lodgings in provincial towns, and in the atmosphere of assize courts, combined with the long separation from his family, would be sufficient to deter most men in large practice from accepting a circuit judgeship. Men of weak health would be almost necessarily shut out. If the effect was to lower the class from which the judges are taken, the temporary advantage to the suitor would be dearly bought. Again, what would be the effect on the legal knowledge or habits of legal reasoning of a judge, of six or ten years' continuous trial of issues of fact, before a "scratch" bar, and without a single opportunity of reasoning out a question of law in a case? Is it not likely that the judge would forget his law, or, at all events, forget to add to his knowledge of law?

There are some other points in Mr. Day's scheme which may be summed up as follows:—He would abolish district registries, sweep away the official referees and references to masters under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, transforming the former officials into masters attached to the different judges; he would add the present chiefs of the two abolished divisions to the Court of Appeal, relieve the common law judges of their attendance in the Divorce Division, and attach a shorthand writer to every court, who should take notes in all cases, furnishing a transcript to either party at a prescribed rate.

COURTS OF INVESTIGATION AND SURVEY.

A MANUAL OF THE PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE OF THE COURTS OF INVESTIGATION INTO SHIPPING CASUALTIES AND OF THE COURTS OF SURVEY, &c. By CLARENCE JOHN PEILE, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-law. London: Waterlow & Sons.

The institution of a new court, and the substitution of written rules for what was, as has been pointed out in our columns, an unwritten practice, gave an opportunity for a work on the courts of inquiry and survey under the Merchant Shipping Acts, of which Mr. Peile has availed himself. He has, with some skill, grouped the sections of the Merchant Shipping Acts, 1854 to 1876, relating to inquiries into shipping casualties, and, in the form of notes to the sections, has called attention to such case law as is to be found in connection with his subject. He then proceeds to deal in the same manner with the sections of the Act of 1876 by which courts of survey were instituted. Here his annotation is necessarily meagre, as there is really no case except Lewis v. Gray (L. R. 1 C. P. D. 452) which contains any judicial interpretation of the new duties of the Board of Trade in regard to the detention of unseaworthy ships. The author says that no cases before a court of survey have been reported; we believe he might with accuracy have gone farther, and said that no such court has yet sat, no one having yet appealed against the decision of the Board of Trade. The rules of procedure are given, with notes; and the reported cases thereon are printed at the end of the book. The work seems to us for the most part carefully done, though there are one or two points in which we find room for correction. Since the decisions of the Court of Appeal in Bustros v. White (24 W. R. 721) and Anderson v. Bank of British Columbia (24 W. R. 624) we are surprised to find Fenner v. South-Eastern Railway and McCorquodale v. Bell alone relied on as the authorities on the question of the privilege of documents from discovery. Again, we must question the accuracy of our author's knowledge when he says (p. 40) that the practice is to give a written discharge to an officer. This has never, to our knowledge, been done in any inquiry held in London, and, indeed, if any document to the effect that no charge will be made is given, it should, as we pointed out, and as the author suggests, be given to the court. We should have been glad also to see the difficult point of the mode of recovering costs ordered by courts of inquiry more fully discussed than is done in this book. And we must express regret that the reports of practice cases have been re-printed without correcting such printers' errors as "Mr. Humphry, Q.C." for "Mr. Murphy, Q.C.," and "commercial offence" for "criminal offence." But, on the whole, the work is well done; and, being in a very handy form, it will be very useful to practitioners in the courts to which it relates, courts whose importance has been much increased since the Act of 1876 has given them a judge of legal training and a fixed code of procedure.

Should Mr. Peile produce a second edition of his book, its usefulness might be increased by the addition of a chapter on the "naval courts" held in foreign ports under sections 260, et seq., of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854.

The Council of the Social Science Association has definitely fixed on the 19th to the 26th of September as the period of the congress to be held in Aberdeen.

Cases of the Week.

BURIAL ACT, 1855 (18 & 19 VICT. c. 128), s. 9—BURIAL WITHIN 100 YARDS OF DWELLING-HOUSE—CONSENT OF OWNER OF HOUSE—PRACTICE—INJUNCTION—"THREATENING AND INTENDING."—A question of some importance upon the construction of section 9 of the Burial Act of 1855 was decided by the Court of Appeal on the 30th of May in a case of Earl Cowley v. Byas. By the Burial Act of 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 85), s. 9, it is provided that "no new burial-ground or cemetery shall be provided and used in the metropolis, or within two miles of any part thereof, without the previous approval of one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State." And section 25 provides that "no ground not already used as, or appropriated for, a cemetery shall be appropriated as a burial-ground, or as an addition to a burial-ground, under this Act, nearer than 200 yards to any dwelling-house, without the consent in writing of the owner, lessee, or occupier of such dwelling-house." By the Act 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, the provisions of section 25 were extended beyond the metropolis, and by the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 87, s. 12, the limit of 200 yards was reduced to 100 yards. By the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 9, the above-mentioned provision of section 25 of the Act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, was repealed, and it was in lieu thereof enacted that "no ground not already used, or appropriated for, a cemetery shall be used for burials under the said Act, or this Act, or either of them, within the distance of 100 yards from any dwelling-house, without such consent as aforesaid." In Earl Cowley v. Byas the facts were briefly these:—In 1865 the defendant obtained the approval of the Home Secretary to the appropriation for a cemetery of about twenty acres of land belonging to the defendant. The defendant then endeavoured, but without success, to form a company for the purpose, and the scheme fell into abeyance until 1876, when it was again mooted. The inhabitants of the district then opposed the scheme, and memorialized the Home Secretary with the view of inducing him to withdraw the approval which his predecessor had given in 1865. He thereupon deputed one of his officers to hold an inquiry into the matter, and, after receiving his report, declined to withdraw the approval. The plaintiff, who was the owner of a house situate close to the boundary of one end of the defendant's land, then instructed his solicitors to take proceedings to prevent the defendant from appropriating his land for a cemetery. The plaintiff's solicitors wrote to the defendant's solicitors, threatening proceedings to obtain an injunction, and the defendant's solicitors replied that "no part of our client's land within 100 yards of any dwelling-house would be used as a cemetery, unless he had taken the necessary steps as prescribed by the Act." They said also, "Our client will not give up any part of his legal rights, though he may never wish to exercise them." The plaintiff's solicitors replied that, unless the defendant would give a written undertaking that no part of his land should be used as a cemetery, they should at once apply for an injunction. The defendant's solicitors replied, "Our client has no present intention whatever of attempting to convert his property into a cemetery, and, in fact, for some years past he had abandoned the idea, until it was suggested to him by some of his friends. He declines to give any such undertaking as you wish, but he repudiates any notion of attempting to convert the property into a cemetery, although, at the same time, he will not give up his right to do so at any future time. This, however, he is willing to do to meet your views and to avoid litigation, if possible—if at any future time he should wish to use his property as a cemetery, he will give you and your client two months' notice of such his intention, so that you can, if you are so advised, take what proceedings you think proper and expedient in the matter." The action was then commenced; the plaintiff moved for an interlocutory injunction to restrain the defendant from using "the land, or any part of it, for burial or for a cemetery," and the Vice-Chancellor granted the injunction until the hearing. He held that the Act prohibited the use of the land for any of the purposes of a cemetery within 100 yards of a dwelling-house, without the consent of the owner of the dwelling-house, and that if a part of the land proposed to be used for the cemetery was within 100 yards from a dwelling-house, the injunction ought to extend to the whole of the land, even though the greater part of it was beyond the limit of 100 yards. The Court of Appeal (Jessel, M.R., Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Baggallay, L.J.) held that the prohibition of section 9 of the Act of 1855, extends only to the use of the land within the prescribed limit for the purpose of actual interment. It might be lawfully used for the ornamental plantations common in cemeteries, or for the building of a chapel, or for a road. No injunction ought, therefore, to have been granted. And the court moreover held that, even if the prohibition went as far as the plaintiff contended that it did, still, after the letters written by the defendant's solicitors, it was impossible to say that the defendant had threatened and intended to do any unlawful act. On the contrary, he had promised, while insisting on his legal rights, not to attempt to exercise them without giving to the plaintiff two months' notice of his intention to do so. Under such circumstances the court said that it would be contrary to the practice of the court to grant an injunction, and the action ought not to have been brought.

BANKRUPTCY—ELECTION OF TRUSTEE—VOTES OF CREDITORS—PROXY—LIQUIDATOR OF COMPANY—BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869, s. 80, SUB-SECTION 8—BANKRUPTCY RULES, 1870, r. 25—BANKRUPTCY FORMS, 1870, Nos. 32, 33, 34—COMPANIES ACT, 1862, ss. 95, 133.—In a case of Ex parte Taylor, heard by the Court of Appeal on the 31st of May, a question arose as to the validity of a proxy signed by the liquidator of a company (in voluntary liquidation) who were creditors of a bankrupt. The question was whether the trustee had been duly elected, and this depended upon the validity of the liquidator's proxy, and the vote given under it. The liquidator, Mr. Price, in his affidavit of proof of the company's debt, described himself as the liquidator of the company, and deposed that the bankrupt was indebted to the company in a sum named, and, at the foot of the affidavit, there was a proxy in this form:—"I appoint A. and B. jointly and separately my proxy in the above matter," and this was signed by Mr. Price, without stating in what character he signed it. This, it was contended, was not a proxy in compliance with the Bankruptcy Rules. Section 80, sub-section 8, of the Act says that "a creditor may, in the prescribed manner, appoint a person to represent him in all matters relating to any debtor or his affairs." R. 85 says that "the instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing under the hand of the creditor, or, if such creditor is a corporation or company, under the hand of an agent stating that he is duly authorized on its behalf; and such instrument shall be according to the form in the schedule." Form No. 32 gives the ordinary form of affidavit of proof of debt, with a form of proxy at the foot of it. Form No. 33 is a form of proxy when not added to proof. Form No. 34 is a form of affidavit of proof of debt by an agent of a company. This form contains the words "I am duly authorized under the seal of the company to make the proof of debt in its behalf," and these words of direction are added [then follow last affidavit, altering form accordingly]. No form of proxy is given. Section 133 of the Companies Act, 1862, provides that in a voluntary liquidation the liquidator may, without the sanction of the court, exercise all the powers by the Act given to the official liquidator; and section 95 provides that the official liquidator shall have power, with the sanction of the court, to do certain things, among which are "to bring or defend any action, suit, or prosecution, or other legal proceeding, in the name and on behalf of the company"; "to do all acts, and to execute, in the name and on behalf of the company, all deeds, receipts, and other documents, and for that purpose to use, when necessary, the company's seal"; "to do and execute all such other things as may be necessary for winding up the affairs of the company and distributing its assets." Nothing is expressly said about proving in the bankruptcy of a debtor to the company. The Court of Appeal (Jessel, M.R., Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Baggallay, L.J.) held that, even if r. 85 applied at all, as to which they doubted whether the liquidator was the agent of the company, it had been sufficiently complied with, and, moreover, that the liquidator had acted within the powers conferred upon him by sections 95 and 133 of the Companies Act, 1862. They therefore held that the election of the trustee was valid.

Societies.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society held at the Law Institution on Tuesday last, Mr. Fell in the chair, the question for discussion was as follows:—"If, under a marriage settlement, a child of a former marriage of the intended wife takes an interest in property brought into settlement by either his mother or the intended husband, is such child a mere volunteer in case of a sale for value of such property?" Mr. Van Sommer opened the debate in the affirmative, and was followed by Mr. Roughton in the negative. The question was ultimately decided on the latter side by a majority of four votes.

THE IRISH SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

The seventh annual banquet in connection with this excellent association was held on the 17th ult. in the spacious dining hall of the King's Inns, Henrietta-street. About a hundred and fifty gentlemen sat down to dinner, comprising members of the bench, and representative men of both branches of the legal profession. The chair was occupied by the Right Hon. Mr. Justice Fitzgerald.

The CHAIRMAN gave "Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen," which was drunk with the greatest loyalty and enthusiasm.

The CHAIRMAN next gave "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family."

The toast was drunk with all the honours.

The CHAIRMAN then gave "The Lord Lieutenant and prosperity to Ireland."

Sir CROKER BARRINGTON, Bart., then gave "The Lord Chancellor and the Irish Bench." Without flattery he might say that during the long history of that bench it had never been more remarkable than at the present for learning, great legal ability, sound integrity, and eloquence. The members of his profession had daily opportunity of witnessing with what impartiality every case that came before their tribunals was adjudicated upon, without regard either to parties or to politics. They could also testify to the great courtesy of every member of the bench towards gentlemen practising before them. He only hoped that as their chairman had said that night, well would be left alone, and that there would be no interference with either the Lord Chancellor or the Irish bench.

The toast was received with all the honours.

Mr. Justice LAWSON, in responding, thanked the company for the very warm manner in which the toast of the Irish bench had been given and received. It afforded him the greatest pleasure to see that splendid hall filled with such a goodly assemblage; and looking round he thought he was justified in feeling confident that the glories of the Irish bench, the Irish bar, and the Irish attorneys and solicitors were not things of the past, but realities of the present. All present were united in this country in the discharge of a most important duty, namely, the administration of justice to the subjects of the realm, and he was persuaded that without any one of the three elements—the bench, the bar, or the attorneys—it would be impossible that the public business could be effectually carried on. He was rejoiced that in an assembly of that kind the toast of the Irish bench was received as it had been that evening, because it showed—as, indeed, his own consciousness told him—that they had not as yet in any respect forfeited the confidence of the public. Sir Croker Barrington had spoken of them in terms which he trusted they deserved; or, at all events, they always endeavoured to deserve; but he thought they might say this, that the sound public opinion of the country was not in favour of any attempt, no matter from what quarter it might come, to degrade either the bench or the bar of this country. It was a favourite creed with some—and perhaps with some in high quarters—that it would be desirable to exclude the bench and the bar of Ireland from all participation in the public life of the country, and confine them to the mere discharge of their duties. But though he might personally have no objection to apply himself exclusively to his office, he hoped the day would never come when the rising bar of the country should be excluded from their fair share of the duties of public life and of the public honours connected with public life. The greatest incentive to progress was the cultivation of the feeling in all that by honest competition and honest industry a man might aspire to and hold the highest position to which a subject of the realm could attain. He hoped that no movement which would tend to check or to paralyze that would ever find sympathy in that sound public opinion. In again thanking them for the manner in which the toast had been received, he would only add that they, as judges, had a difficult and a responsible duty to discharge. The properties and the fortunes of the Queen's subjects very often depended upon their decisions, and they felt that responsibility, but they felt also that it was their duty to discharge it honestly, fearlessly, and impartially—neither looking for popular praise nor dreading popular clamour.

The CHAIRMAN said he had now to propose the toast of the evening—"The Solicitors' Benevolent Association, and may prosperity attend it." Upon the two occasions that he had had the honour of being present there before, it seemed to him that the practice was to accompany that sentiment with a short but forcible charity sermon. Such was not his intention, and he craved their leave in that respect to depart from precedent. He did not intend to preach the merits of benevolence, though it was the sole virtue which, even here below, carried with it more than its own reward; but he had to express his deep regret that so large a number of the solicitors and attorneys of Ireland had failed as yet to become members of this association. He might, however, still announce to them that they were prospering—that they never had a greater number of subscribers than in the past year, and that their income had been disbursed in more numerous instances of benevolent relief than on any former occasion. He also asked leave to announce that a lady recently departed from amongst them—whose whole life was one story of benevolence—that she had not forgotten that society, but had left them a bequest of £500. He need scarcely say that he alluded to the late Mrs. George Roe. Now, though he did not intend to preach a charity sermon, he thought he might point out to them, not how the funds of their institution might be increased, but how the calls upon their funds might be more limited, and it was by a strenuous advice to the governing body and the heads of the profession that they will look to it that the body of attorneys and solicitors receive at least their due proportion of those public appointments which, relating specially to the administration of the law, are never better filled for the public good than when experienced, educated solicitors—even though they should be veterans—were selected to occupy them. He could not too highly praise the ability of the committee who had the management of that society, in establishing that annual meeting—he might call it festival—without imposing any charge upon the funds at their disposal. They of the bench and they of the bar met there to extend to the members of that sister profession, the attorneys, the hand of fellowship—to state that there was no rivalry between them, no adverse interests. They met there, moreover, in the cause of benevolence, which they all recognized as a fundamental element and the light and glory of the Christian character, and to promote that benevolence through their means. He had no doubt they would all join with him in receiving this toast, and in coupling the Benevolent Society with the ardent wish and feeling that it might long continue to prosper.

The toast was received with all the honours.

Mr. ROBERT C. LEE responded, thanking the chairman for all he had said of the association and its management, and expressing a hope that in the current year there would be a large accession to its roll of membership.

Mr. WM. ROCHE proposed "The Health of the Chairman." He had watched, not with surprise, but with pleasure, the right hon. gentleman's career at the bar, in the Senate house, and in his distinguished position on the bench. Addressing legal gentlemen it would be presumptuous to attempt to point out the many distinguished qualities for which Mr. Justice Fitzgerald was so remarkable. They all knew the ability and the patience with which he discharged the onerous and responsible duties of his high office, while the courtesy and the kindness he extended to those members of both branches of the profession who practised before him was widely known and universally appreciated. He would take the liberty of conveying to their chairman, as President of the Solicitors' Benevolent Society, their grateful thanks for his great kindness in presiding upon that occasion, and by his presence and the weight of his name advancing the interests of this great charity.

The CHAIRMAN, in responding, expressed to the attorney profession his deep-felt gratitude for the increasing kindness and support which he had received at the hands of its members during the course of a very long life.

Mr. HENRY T. DIX gave "The Bar of Ireland." He was rejoiced to find such thorough cordiality and friendship existing between the two branches of the profession. The existence of such a feeling was necessary, not only for their own interests, but in the interest of the public, that great client for whom they all did business. Their different callings led them in different paths, but these paths led to the one end—the benefit of the public, and the proper administration of the laws in this country. Doubtless all present had at one time or another heard the cry urged—"Amalgamate the two professions." It was raised by two sections—unsuccessful barristers, who thought that if they could only get at their clients direct, without the intervention of an attorney, their fortunes would be made, and dissatisfied solicitors—gentlemen who believed themselves above their profession, but who more frequently fell far beneath it. He trusted that the bogus scheme of amalgamation, mooted from time to time, would never come to pass; but that some fifty years hence a solicitor of the future would be proposing the health of the bar, and would do it with the same sincerity and good faith with which he did it at that moment.

The toast was drunk with great cordiality.

Mr. Serjeant ARMSTRONG responded. He was glad to find that the Irish bar had not been forgotten in an assembly like that. He was happy to reflect that, for many years past, and at the present time, the judicial bench of Ireland had been supplied from the Irish bar without the introduction of any foreign element. On that bench they now had gentlemen who, in the Senate and elsewhere, achieved the highest distinctions, and who exhibited in their official positions the profoundest learning, the greatest dignity, and what was understood by the commonest of the people—perfect impartiality and love of justice. When in the course of events vacancies arose he (the serjeant) trusted that the Irish bar would not be found unequal to the position it would then be called upon to fill, and that the ranks of the judicial bench might be recruited from among themselves, without imposing upon gentlemen reposing upon the pleasant banks of the Thames the inconveniences of migration to the equally tranquil, but less innoxious, banks of the Liffey. He expressed his deep regret that out of the 1,000 enrolled barristers in Ireland not fifty were to be found either donors or subscribers to this excellent charity, and called upon his brethren to remember the saying, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and open their purse-strings more liberally.

Mr. HENRY S. MACREDDY proposed "Our Musical Friends," and the toast was warmly received and responded to.

Judge ORMSBY proposed the toast of "The Attorneys and Solicitors of Ireland."

Mr. B. W. ROCHE responded.

The company separated at an advanced hour.—Irish Law Times.

Sir James Cochrane, says the Times, has retired from the Chief Justiceship of Gibraltar, after serving in that office for the lengthened term of thirty-six years, a period, it is believed, unexampled in judicial annals, and so long as to have entitled him to the distinction of being the Father of the Judicial Bench throughout her Majesty's dominions. It is altogether forty-seven years since Sir James Cochrane first went to Gibraltar, he having been appointed to the office of Attorney-General there by his late Majesty. The Gibraltar Chronicle, in noticing his long services and connection with the colony, remarks that Sir James is followed in his retirement from his seat on the judicial bench, and the high post he has so long filled with such dignity and honour, by the regrets of those with whom he has been professionally associated and by the universal respect of all classes of the community. Sir William Doyle, the newly-appointed Chief Justice, arrived at the Rock on the 1st inst. and was sworn into office the same day.

Obituary.

SIR WILLIAM HACKETT.

A telegram from Colombo announces the death, from cholera, of Sir William Hackett, Knight, Chief Justice of Ceylon. The late Chief Justice was the son of the late Mr. Bartholemew Hackett, of Cork, where he was born in 1824. He was educated at Stonyhurst College, and afterwards at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in 1846. He was called to the bar in Ireland in 1848, and was also called to the bar at Lincoln's-inn in Michaelmas Term, 1851. He was for some years a member of the Northern Circuit, and he was appointed Queen's Advocate for the Gold Coast in 1861. He became Chief Justice of the colony in 1863, and Lieutenant-Governor in 1864. Two years later he was knighted by patent on being made recorder of Prince of Wales's Island, and on the subsequent transfer of the Straits Settlements from the Indian Government to the Crown he became judge of the Supreme Court at Penang. Sir W. Hackett acted for several months as Chief Justice of the Straits Settlements, and in 1875, on the annexation of Fiji, he was appointed Chief Justice of the new colony and a member of the Legislative Council. All the arrangements for the organization of the law courts in Fiji were carried out by him, and in November last he was appointed to succeed Sir Edward Creasy as Chief Justice of the Island of Ceylon. Sir W. Hackett was married to a daughter of the late Mr. William Bryant of the Bengal Civil Service.

MR. THOMAS JAMES ARNOLD.

Mr. Thomas James Arnold, senior magistrate at the Westminster Police-court, died at his residence, 1, Greville-place, Kilburn, on the 20th ult., after a long illness. Mr. Arnold was born in 1803, and was educated at St. Paul's School, and the University of Göttingen. He was called to the bar at Lincoln's-inn in Michaelmas Term, 1829, and practised for many years on the Northern Circuit and at the Liverpool Sessions. He soon acquired the reputation of a sound lawyer, and had a good practice, especially in criminal business. He was also known as the author of several valuable legal works, including "The Law as to Public Meetings and Political Societies," "The Law of Municipal Corporations," and "The Duties of a Justice of the Peace out of Sessions." He also compiled a volume of Common Pleas reports, and (in conjunction with the late Sir William Hodges) a volume of Queen's Bench reports. In 1847 he was appointed a stipendiary magistrate at Worship-street Police-court, and four years later he was removed to Westminster. Mr. Arnold's magisterial career was a most successful one, and it is stated that no decision of his was ever reversed, either by the quarter sessions, or by the superior courts. In addition to his accurate legal knowledge he possessed great tact and knowledge of human nature. Mr. Arnold was the oldest magistrate in the metropolis. He had been for some months out of health, and heretofore obtained leave of absence from the Home Secretary in the hope that entire rest might restore his strength, but in vain. On taking his seat at Westminster on the 22nd ult., Mr. Woolrych said, "The loss of my learned colleague and valued friend, notwithstanding his long illness, has come upon me with painful surprise. As an astute lawyer, distinguished by mental efficiency and brilliancy of intellect and legal knowledge, Mr. Arnold's equal has seldom, if ever, been seen, and he was an ornament to, and a meritorious member of, the metropolitan bench. His loss will be deeply deplored, and his memory long cherished, by a large circle of sincere and attached friends." Mr. Smyth, on behalf of the solicitors practising at the court, expressed his sense of Mr. Arnold's high qualities, and especially of his impartiality and kindness.

MR. JOHN BAILEY LANGHORNE.

Mr. John Bailey Langhorne, solicitor and notary, died at his residence, Outwood Hall, near Wakefield, on the 17th ult., after a few hours' suffering, from an attack of apoplexy.

Mr. Langhorne was the son of Mr. John Langhorne, of Berwick-upon-Tweed. He was admitted a solicitor in 1839, and practised for a few years at Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He then removed to Richmond, Yorkshire, where he carried on business in partnership with Mr. John Robinson Tomlin, and held the offices of town clerk of Richmond, joint registrar of the diocese of Ripon, registrar of the Royal peculiar of Middleham, deputy-registrar of the consistory court at Richmond, clerk to the guardians of the Beeth Union, and superintendent-registrar. On the passing of the Probate Act, 1857, Mr. Langhorne was appointed district registrar of the Court of Probate for the West Riding, and removed to Wakefield, where he practised up to the day of his death. He was also a notary public, a commissioner for oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature, and a perpetual commissioner for the North and West Ridings of Yorkshire.

MR. EDWIN LOVELL.

Mr. Edwin Lovell, solicitor, of Wells, died at Dinder, Somersetshire, on the 21st ult. Mr. Lovell was the youngest son of Mr. Joseph Lovell Lovell, solicitor, of Chilcote Manor. He was born in 1808, and was educated at Eton. He was admitted a solicitor in 1831, and had ever since practised in the city of Wells. He was formerly in partnership with the late Mr. Edmund Broderip, with his father, and with his elder brother, Mr. Edward Lovell, and since his brother's death he has carried on the business alone. He had been for forty years clerk of the peace for Somersetshire, and he was also clerk to the county lieutenancy, and he had been registrar of the Wells County Court (Circuit No. 54) ever since the passing of the first County Court Act. He was for many years the captain commanding the Wells Rifle Volunteers. Mr. Lovell was married to the daughter of his former partner, Mr. Edmund Broderip.

The following arrangements have been made for the circuits of the judges at the next assizes:—Western.—Lord Chief Justice Coleridge and Mr. Justice Lindley. "W. B. S."—a signature which will be recognized—writes to the Times as follows:—"In the Times of the 22nd inst. a letter appeared complaining, in effect, that the chief clerks of the Master of the Rolls and the Vice-Chancellors declined to entertain summonses in causes transferred to Mr. Justice Fry, and, although your correspondent did not so state, the inference has been drawn from his letter that the chief clerks, if they had been so minded, might have disposed of such applications, and thereby have saved suitors the increased expense of applying to Mr. Justice Fry by motion in court. Will you kindly allow me to suggest that the Master of the Rolls and the Vice-Chancellors probably decided, as is undoubtedly the fact, that they had no further jurisdiction whatever in any cause transferred to Mr. Justice Fry, and that therefore the chief clerks, who represent them in chambers, have no such jurisdiction? If the chief clerks had had jurisdiction, Mr. Justice Fry would no doubt have dismissed the motions made to him in court, with costs, as irregular and unnecessary."

A correspondent of the Times says:—"The Irish Judicature Bill and the Irish County Courts Bill have, in different shapes, been before Parliament for four sessions, and were singled out in the Speech from the Throne this year as measures that ought to become law. Until the first Bill shall have been placed on the statute-book—not to speak of other things—the whole system of procedure at the Four Courts will remain almost as different from that now in use in Westminster Hall as from that in the courts of France or Germany. Until the second Bill shall have become law, the peasantry and lower middle class in Ireland will be left without legal protection in respect of equitable rights, which, since the Land Act of 1870, have become very large and important. Both measures have been long called for by the Irish public—at least, by the well-informed and disinterested portion of it; and, if I do not mistake, almost every Irish equity judge—notably the present Lord Chancellor of Ireland—has proclaimed from the bench that the County Courts Bill has become a necessity. It is, however, commonly reported that no real effort will be made to pass either Bill in 1877; nay, that both have been shelved, perhaps for ever."

On Tuesday, at the Central Criminal Court, while Mr. Commissioner Kerr was trying two men for obtaining from a Mr. Thomas Galpin £200 by false pretences, an incident occurred which produced a painful sensation in court. One of the jurymen was suddenly taken ill in the jury-box. He was removed thence by his brother jurymen into one of the corridors, and a medical man was brought, but in vain, for in a very short time he ceased to live. The deceased proved to be a Mr. Charles Stuart. One of his brother jurymen, addressing Mr. Commissioner Kerr, said he was present in court on the previous day, and heard the deceased ask one of the judges, whom he believed to be the recorder, to be excused from serving on account of his age—seventy-three. The reply of the judge was, in effect, that he could not excuse him, but that the applicant might get his name erased from the jury list in consideration of his advanced age, on applying in the proper quarter. On Wednesday, Mr. Avory explained in court that the gentleman asked to be excused on account of his age, but he said nothing about his health, and, being informed by the court that his age was now no excuse for his not serving, he was asked by Mr. Read, an officer of the court, whether he was ill, to which he most distinctly replied that he was not ill, and felt himself quite able to serve. He then cheerfully turned round and took his seat with the other jurymen. He remained in waiting during Monday to serve, but was not put into the jury box. On Tuesday morning he appeared again in the court, and then entered the jury-box without any observation from him; and in the course of the trial the unfortunate event of his sudden death occurred.

"A Student of Fifty Years' Standing" has published "a law tract for the times," entitled "The Patient, the Physician, and the Fee" (Butterworths), in which he sets out by stating that, on permission to study and to practice at law without authoritative digest or code of the law, the gross amount paid to the State by persons now alive is estimated at from £4,000,000 to £5,000,000, and of which it is estimated the class termed solicitors have contributed about three-fourths of the entire fund; and then proceeds to inquire: 1st. Whether high and unequal imposts, without application of the fund to educational purposes, or moderate uniform imposts, with high education provided, would tend most to elevate the standard of legal knowledge, integrity, and excellence in the professions. 2nd. Whether, in the interest of the State, it be expedient to continue the heavy annual imposts upon solicitors, the only lawyers to whom thirty millions of the population can have recourse. 3rd. Whether the entire amount of stamp duties to be received on admission to study and to practice, in each branch of the profession, should not be appropriated to legal educational purposes in London, Edinburgh, and Dublin, reverting in the same proportions as those duties have been contributed from England, Ireland, and Scotland, to the authorities having the guidance and direction of legal study in each capital, each separate branch of the profession to receive according to the scale of payments made by the members thereof. The expenditure to be made subject to rules to be prescribed by the Secretary of State for the Home Department. 4th. Whether the amount of fees paid by articulated clerks, students, and professional men, now alive, amounting to over £4,000,000, has not entitled them to the facilities in study which a digest or codification of the law would afford. 5th. Whether, in consideration of the fact that there is no class who could derive greater advantage from a digest and code of the law than solicitors, it might not be in their interest to have continued for a limited term of three or five years the payment of certificate duty on an understanding that the fund should be applied to producing either digest or codes.

The Report and Accounts for the year 1876, presented to the Shareholders at the ANNUAL MEETING, on Thursday, 17th May, 1877, at which BERNARD HALL, Esq., presided, showed, in the FIRE BRANCH,

That the premiums for 1876 after deducting Re-insurances amounted to £403,815, being an increase of £33,810 over the premium income of 1875, and the losses to £227,628, being 56.4 per cent. on the premiums of the year; in the

LIFE DEPARTMENT,

That new policies had been issued for £200,979, and that the Life Fund by the additions made to it as the result of the year's operations now represents 66.1 per cent. of the entire net premiums received on every policy in force.

WM. FAREBROTHER & CO., Auctioneers,

Land and Estate Agents, Surveyors, and Valuers, 167, Strand, W.C.—Mr. Wm. Farebrother, son of the late Alderman Farebrother, the well-known Auctioneer, formerly of Lancaster-place, Strand, begs respectfully to inform the nobility, gentry, and public that he has commenced business at the above address, under the style of Wm. Farebrother & Co., in connection with his country branches. Mr. Farebrother's long experience in all departments of the business, extending over a period of 25 years, will, he hopes, secure for him a continuation of the support so long and generously accorded to his father. Mr. Farebrother avails himself of this opportunity to remind the public generally that he is the only member of the family now living, or person of the name, connected with the auctioneering, &c., profession.

DORSET.

Perpetual Rent Charge of £214 12s. 9d. per annum, arising out of an estate of over 1,200 acres, presenting to trustees and capitalists a first-class investment.

MESSERS. EDWIN FOX & BOUSFIELD will SELL, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20th, at TWO o'clock, a PERPETUAL RENT CHARGE, or rent charge in fee, of £214 12s. 9d. per annum, amply secured on a valuable estate, situate at Gunville Tarrant, in the county of Dorset, on the borders of Wilts, about six miles from Blandford Forum, seven miles from Shaftesbury and Cranborne respectively, comprising 1,209s. 3s. 13p. It is difficult to find any investment which equals a rent charge in security and soundness, and it may be safely asserted that trustees and others having the command of capital (for which at the present time it is so difficult to find a safe outlet) cannot possibly obtain a more favourable scope for its profitable employment.

Particulars may be had of
CHARLES THOMAS ROBINS, Esq., Solicitor, Shaftesbury, Dorset; of Messrs. COBBE & SMITH, Solicitors, Salisbury, Wilts; of
Messrs. VENNING, ROBINS, & VENNING, Solicitors, 9, Token-house-yard, London;

It comprises a superior detached residence, called Cecile House, in perfect order throughout, approached by a carriage sweep, and containing every accommodation for a family, stabling and outbuildings, well-shrubbed pleasure grounds, productive kitchen and fruit gardens and graperies in the rear, with some park-like meadow land. In hand, and possession will be given on completion of the purchase. A detached residence adjoining, known as Amodes Villa, very similar in description, with excellent garden in the rear; let on lease to Mr. Marshall, Esq., at the low rent of £130 per annum. Also six freehold ground-rents of £10 each, amply secured upon and arising from six capital residences adjoining, and forming the whole of Selina-crescent, the value of which may be fairly estimated at £400 per annum. The property comprises altogether about seven acres, and in addition to its residential attractions presents an unusually favourable opportunity for a profitable building speculation, as by the judicious formation of a road through the centre of the land several charming sites would be developed for the erection of first-class residences, commanding an uninterrupted view of Muswell-hill and the Alexandra Palace and park, and without interfering with the privacy and enjoyment of Cecile House.

MESSERS. NORTON, TRIST, WATNEY, & CO.

are instructed by the executors of the late Wm. Booth, Esq., to offer the above PROPERTY for SALE, in JULY next. To be viewed by cards only.
